POET R. H. STODDARD DIES IN NEW YORK.

Well-Known Author Succumbs to Rheumatism—Had Hard Struggle With Poverty in Early Life.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
New York, May 12.—Richard Henry Stoddard, among the last of the older group of American poets and essayists, died this morning about 8 o'clock at his home, No. 23 East Fifteenth street. He had suffered several years with rheumatism, but it was not until a week ago that his affliction became serious.

At that time rheumatism of the heart developed and he sank rapidly until the end of the morning. He was attended only by two nurses, he being the last of his family. Mr. Stoddard was born at Hingham, Mass., July 2, 1832. His immediate ancestors were seafaring men. Reuben Stoddard, his father, was drowned in the wreck of the ship Royal Arch. When the boy was 11 years old his mother came to this city, having again married a sailor.

To help the family out, the boy was sent into the streets to sell matches. The lad went to school until he was 15 years old, when he obtained a clerkship in a lawyer's office at a salary of less than $1 a week. There he became successively a clerk, a tailor's apprentice, a clerk in a belows factory, a blacksmith and an iron molder. His nights were spent in reading and writing poetry.

Mr. Stoddard, when 25 years old, married Miss Elizabeth Brewster of Massachusetts. They lived in poverty until Nathaniel Hawthorne procured from President Franklin Pierce for the young man an appointment in the custom-house in this city. He remained in the position seventeen years.

A collection of poems, "Songs of Summer," was published by the poet at this time and his reputation became established. His prose writings attracted wide attention. "Adventures in Fairyland," "Town and Country," a life of Humboldt and prefaces to the scenes of "Bric-a-Brac" books being among them.

The last literary work upon which Mr. Stoddard was engaged when his health failed was "Reveries Personal and Literary," a volume of memoirs covering a period of more than fifty years. The book was practically finished and will be issued in the autumn.

CURTIS JETT SEEKS RELEASE.

Alleged Assassin of J. B. Marcum Brings Proceedings.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Winchester, Ky., May 12.—By means of habeas corpus proceedings Curtis Jett to-day endeavored to escape a hearing in Clark County on a warrant charging him with the assassination of J. B. Marcum in Breathitt County.

Jett is naturally anxious to be taken back to Breathitt County, where it is certain that a prosecution under existing conditions would be a farce. In an amended petition filed to-day Jett alleges that should he be released from custody he would be in danger of assassination. He is now held in the Winchester Jail.

There is little danger of either, and Judge Benton, before whom the proceedings were sought, while not passing on either feature of the case, continued it until to-morrow. Subpoenas have been sent to Breathitt County for witnesses who can give evidence against Jett. If it is found that he is guilty of the result when they return to Jackson.

Though there has been much talk of a special session of the Legislature to consider the abolishment of the county and other methods of securing justice in that county, it is likely that nothing will be done.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OBSERVED BY SISTERS OF CHARITY.

Fiftieth Anniversary of St. Ann's Asylum Spent in Entertaining Friends and Benefactors of Institution.

The Sisters of Charity held open house yesterday at St. Ann's Asylum, corner of Tenth and O'Fallon streets, the occasion being the golden jubilee celebration of that institution.

Friends and benefactors from all parts of the city greeted and congratulated the sisters on the good work accomplished by their order in fifty years of service, and also took part in the solemn service of the morning.

At 9 o'clock solemn high mass was celebrated with the Reverend Father Edward Penion, rector of St. Bridget's Church, as celebrant. The Reverend Father O. J. McDonald of St. Ann's Church acted as deacon, and the Reverend Father Feely of Kenrick Seminary performed the office of master of ceremonies.

During the service a sermon was preached by the Reverend Father D. S. Phelan of Mount Carmel Church in Baden. Bishop J. J. Glennon visited the asylum and spoke a few words of encouragement to the good women in charge.

Some of the ladies who visited yesterday assisted Sister Mary, superior of the institution, in making it pleasant for the guests and inmates by getting up a little impromptu musical entertainment during the afternoon, and thus the day passed off pleasantly.

St. Ann's Asylum, as it is commonly called, was opened on May 12, 1853, by four Sisters of Charity from Emmitsburg, Md., who came to take charge of the institution of the late Archbishop Kenrick and Mrs. Anna H. Biddle, the foundress, a daughter of the late John Mullanphy.

Modest quarters were secured at the corner of Eleventh and Marion street, but these soon proved inadequate for the growing needs of the institution and five years later the building at Tenth and O'Fallon streets was erected and presented to the Sisters by Archbishop Kenrick.

To build a much larger institution at the corner of Page boulevard and Academy avenues, but which was not completed until 1890 because of the lack of funds.

Sister Ann Frances is hopeful, however, that the new institution will be completed before the World's Fair is over, when material and labor will not be so expensive. St. Ann's Asylum yearly extends to an average of 600 persons.

MISTREATMENT STORY DENIED.

Gov. Yates Declares He Received Every Courtesy in St. Louis.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Springfield, Ill., May 12.—Governor Yates and the members of his staff who accompanied him to St. Louis to attend the dedication of the World's Fair positively deny the story that they were discourteously treated while in St. Louis.

Because of the effect the story may have upon Illinoisans who will attend the Exposition, Governor Yates refutes the story. In an interview to-day he said:

"We were accorded every courtesy and given every consideration. Upon our arrival in St. Louis, as is customary, one of my staff officers reported to the chief functionary of the occasion, President Francis, that the Governor of Illinois and his staff and arrived, were quartered at the Planter's hotel and were at his service."

"Governor Francis immediately responded, sending his compliments and advising that he would call at our headquarters at 10 o'clock in the evening."

"Promptly Governor Francis, accompanied by the Mayor of St. Louis, visited us and paid their respects. From that time until our departure we were the recipients of every courtesy from the Exposition officials and every one connected with the ceremonies of the occasion."

LAW SUIT OVER A FLAG.

Plaintiff Declares He Will Take Case to U. S. Supreme Court.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.
Evansville, Ind., May 12.—An interesting suit for the possession of a United States flag has been taken to the Circuit Court of this county.

Eben C. Poole, a Justice of the Peace, and Frank Willes, a Constable, were members of a fraternal order that disbanded less than a year ago. Willes, who was color-bearer in the order, kept the flag, and Poole, who held the highest office, thought he was entitled to it, and when Willes refused to give up the flag he brought suit to recover it.

Several trials have resulted and the flag still remains in the hands of Willes. The costs in the case have already amounted to ten times the cost of the flag.

Poole declares he will take the case to the United States Supreme Court if it becomes necessary.
